

Workplace Learning 2. Reflection.

My feelings toward the group is that we are a passionate group of people that appear to share common interests and concerns regarding the availability and delivery of adult education and the state of the nation.

We are a diverse group in respect to our professions, there is a great deal of respect for each others opinions. I feel able to express my ideas.

The leadership role changes all the time, this happens easily, no one wants to dominate too much. Everyone is encouraged to have their say.

Some people not saying much which is fine as long as they are feeling included, I feel concerned about that.

I was feeling like I couldn't face another workshop but this group is very different from the last one so am enjoying the challenge of putting on a different type of workshop and am enjoying getting to know a new group of people.
